Page 1: Home (Introduction to botanical illustration (what it is / why it matters))
Page 2: History of botanical illustration (can be brief or shown in a timeline format)
Page 3: Techniques (where you can show variety in different illustration methods)
Page 5: Modern botanical illustration (tie it all back together to show what it looks like in the modern day, could be mainly image focused)

Notes:

- Color palette is:

- I like the idea of showing the images as cutouts, so maybe lean into that idea when designing the site
- Famous botanical illustrators to include in that section:
    - Rory McEwen
        - For reference: https://www.botanicalartandartists.com/about-rory-mcewen.html
    - Pandora Sellars
        - For reference: https://www.botanicalartandartists.com/about-pandora-sellars.html
    - Leonhart Fuchs

        - For reference: https://www.botanicalartandartists.com/about-leonhart-fuchs.html
- You can do all the pages I listed out, or you can do one continuous page with the information in that order, totally up to you!
- Since Patricia is more skilled in computer science than I am, feel free to take creative and organizational liberty in the initial mockups, and next week we can go over what I like and don't like about the different aspects of each.
